

Convention Sponsors

BP Amoco – London Britannic House

BP Amoco is a leader in meeting the world's needs for oil, gas, solar power and petrochemicals without damaging the environment. Main activities include exploration and production of crude oil and natural gas; refining, marketing, supply and transportation; and manufacturing and marketing of petrochemicals. BP has well-established operations in Europe, North and South America, Australia, Asia and Africa.

Locus, Inc. – Madison, Wisconsin

Locus, Inc. is an OEM products company specializing in Loran systems for timing and navigation, as well as wireless radio modems for commercial applications.

Ilgen Simulation Technologies, Inc. – Goleta, California

ISTI specializes in modeling and simulation as applied to positioning, navigation, communications, and support for a wide variety of civilian and military applications with information technology solutions. ISTI also owns Simcentral.com and AffinityCity.com, offering network-based services and network architecture products.

AB Management Associates – Burke, Virginia

AB Management Associates is a consulting firm in Washington, DC that assists clients with government business. Expertise includes navigation, landing systems, and other FAA-related matters.

Megapulse, Inc. – Billerica, Massachusetts

Megapulse manufactures Loran-C transmitters, timing and monitoring equipment, and provides their equipment and services for Loran-C operations worldwide.

Reelektronika

A consulting company specializing in radio positioning systems, navigation, radar, and signal processing for land, marine and aeronautic applications.

W R Systems Ltd.

Technical Products Ltd.

The International Loran Association gratefully acknowledges the contributions from all its sponsors, exhibitors, and volunteers in bringing you ILA 29.

